

Rainy Day

I wish the rain would go away. What a pain to stay inside the main house. I cannot wait for the sun to shine so I can go outside without delay.

Mom says she's afraid we will have to remain inside and not to complain. There are lots of ways to use my brain to play, she says.

Maybe I can just play with my train set in the hallway or make a runway for my toy plane.

I also have crayons and a paint, but I used them yesterday.

"When will the raindrops stop?" I yell in vain.

But it is still raining.

So, I will wait some more.

But then again, what about my clay! That will make me feel better on this gray day.

Maybe I can make my clay into the shape of a ship or a sailboat?

Then I can give it to Mom for her birthday.

Thanks, brain! What a great way to spend a rainy day.
